摘要

With the diversified opening up of democratic society and the change of traditional values, the role of the military is becoming more and more diverse. It is no longer confined to battlefield operations as in the past. Where the situation concerning the security of the country is concerned, the military should voluntarily move forward courageously. According to Article 1 of the Guiding Principles of Combat and Combat, the military's mission is to strengthen training for the troops and enhance the effective deterrence of the defensive force so as to ensure the safety of the country and its people. The core values and military training of military personnel are precisely "state responsibility and honor." In addition to their military training, the military devoted itself to natural disasters and rescue work, should also improve its own academic ability and enhance its own abilities. For the individual to enhance the competitiveness of the benefit, but also on the overall combat capability, a positive boost. Therefore, this study analyzed the characteristics that the model of the military should have in order to create a good image of the military and create an elite brigade with solid combat power, which became a barrier to national security through the hierarchical analysis.
